Dear Annabelle,

In the Hours of calm
reflections,

In the Hours of social
Glee,

When of other class-

You are fondly
thinking

Won't you sometimes think of me?

The Smack at Indiana Normal School.
Johnny Jones and Jennie Bray were in the library one day.

8-9-22

Jennie had to get a lesson
But Johnny soon had Jennie guessing.

He looked into her eyes so blue and whispered softly, "none like you"

"Is here at Normal School I'm sure,"
Then moved his chair up closer to her.

"There's no girl here that wears such dresses nor is there one who has such tresses."

Soon they were lost in conversation.
They most forgot their recitation.

Only one copy was to be had,
Both of them were very glad.

Johnny did not have much time
And the print was very fine,

So they put their heads together,
Frowning at the book on "weather"

Never had there been such bliss,
Johnny helped it with a kiss.

Jennie then kissed Johnny, too,
And some-one told Mrs. Brew.

When Mrs. Brew told Dr. Death
They'd seen a justice of the Peace.

The sexton said "Their time here's done."

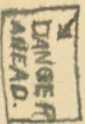

The squire said, "you two are one"

Then all these happy days
shall all be past and gone
I often think it shall be
Sleep in your grave alone
All this and more have I to say
Night coming on I haste away
With meditation read these lines
You will in them a question find.
